Three blocks can be identified on the site – a white block which serves as an entrance to the house, a block of uneven texture clad with sesame wood and a double-height skewed block to one side of the pool.

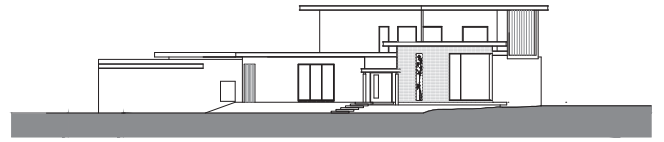

The dining room flows into the outdoors and bridges the public and private areas. A swimming pool and a zen garden define the outdoor experience.

A walkway floating on a water body leads to the entrance foyer that connects to the living room and the home theatre.

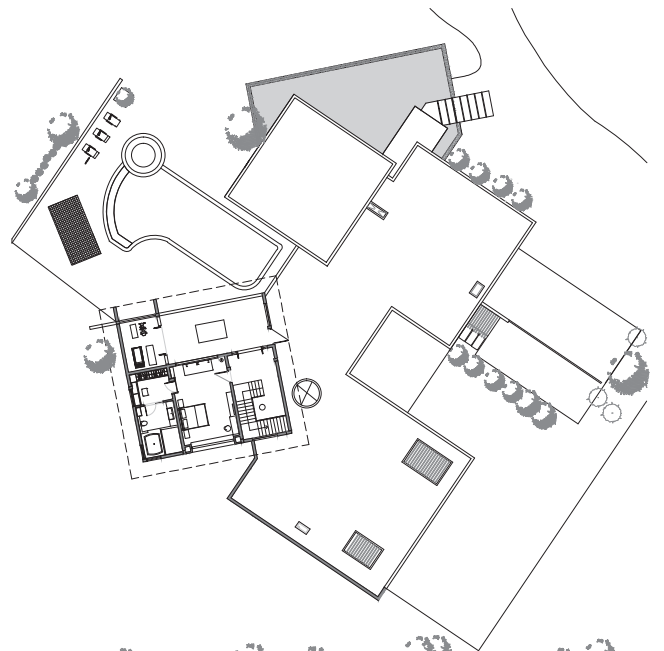

A corner of the living room overlooks the water body and garden through its full-height glazing while the other leads to the swimming pool and deck.

THE PEEP HOUSE

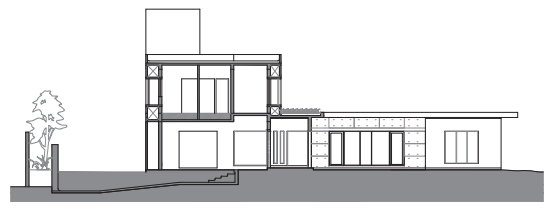

A stark solid wall with perforations veils the house, allowing glimpses through the punctures. The site is occupied by the house, the Zen garden and the swimming pool.

The landscape blends these areas seamlessly to strike a perfect balance of the interior and exterior. A singular cuboidal mass, resting firmly above the solid wall, forms the first view of the house.

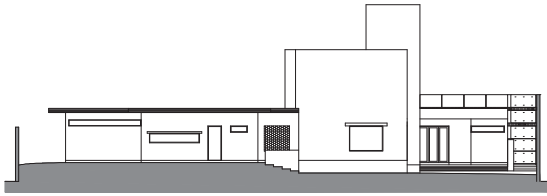

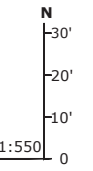

The material palette consists of natural materials like brick, Kota stone, white marble and wood. The house is flooded with natural light and is well-ventilated.
